The Story of Afonso and Isabel: A Love Beyond Kingdoms

In the 15th century, the Convento do Espinheiro, in the heart of the Alentejo, was the scene of an unexpected love story between King Afonso V and Isabel of Portugal.

Promised to the king as part of a political treaty, Isabel found in him a man of courage and vulnerability, awakening a mutual empathy. United by a passion for the fine arts, music and literature, they built a complicity that transcended politics.

Afonso, torn between duty and love, confessed all his fears to Isabel. Wisely, she replied: "True love does not demand, but endures the greatest difficulties." Years later, in an attempt to rekindle the feelings overshadowed by routine, the king took Isabel to the Convento do Espinheiro, a haven of peace and history.

Between simple candlelit dinners and the serene silence of the convent, they rediscovered the love that united them. The presence of each other, free from the pressures of court, brought them a long-lost peace, reaffirming that true love always flourishes, even in difficult times.
